᠋ᠢᠷᠬᠠᠩᠭ᠋ᠠᠢ ᠠᠶᠢᠮᠠᠭ

Arkhangai Province offers fantastic opportunities for rest and training. Natural landmarks such as the Taikhar Stone, Bulgan Mountain, and Chuluut Canyon provide the perfect environment for athletes to test their physical strength and engage in psychological exercises. Trekking through highlands, rock formations, and mountain paths helps improve endurance and prepares athletes for new challenges.

Additionally, the unique natural surroundings will strengthen athletes mentally and help them overcome the psychological pressure of the competition. The nature of Arkhangai is the perfect place for Mas-Wrestling athletes to engage in outdoor training!

KHARANDAA ROCK

In some regions of our country, particularly in volcanic areas, there are magnificent stone formations known as "Kharandaa Rock" or "Kharandaa Stones." These are natural, stunning rock formations with many facets, often clustered with crystals. The renowned educator O. Namnandorj first wrote about the hexagonal columns near the Tsongjin Stone, Taishir's Khombogo Hill, and the bridge near Tsagaan Olm's bridge in the 1960s, introducing them to the public.

He also noted that, apart from these locations, there are 4-6 sided crystal rocks in Arkhangai, Dundgovi, and Sukhbaatar provinces. However, he emphasized that perfect hexagonal stones, like those at Tsongjin Stone, are rare. These rocks appear as natural wonders and symbols of architectural beauty.

TAIKHAR STONE

Taikhar Stone is a significant natural and historical landmark located in Chuluut soum, Arkhangai province, Mongolia. The stone stands 18 meters tall and is a large granite outcrop. Not only is Taikhar Stone a natural wonder, but it is also rich in history and cultural heritage. The stone was formed over millions of years, as the Tamir River eroded the northern bank of the granite promontory, creating the current placement of the stone.

Its unique geological and cultural importance makes it a notable site for both locals and visitors

BULGAN MOUNTAIN

Bulgan Mountain is located between the North Tamir and South Tamir rivers. Historically, the nobles of Khalkh highly revered and offered tributes to this mountain, highlighting its significant role in their culture and religious beliefs.

Bulgan Mountain is one of the places with potential for tourism due to its natural beauty and historical and cultural landmarks. In addition to admiring the natural scenery, visitors have the opportunity to explore the surrounding area through hiking, while also learning about Mongolia's traditional culture and religious practices.

CHULUUT CANYON

The Tamir River originates from the highest part of the Khangai Mountain Range, flowing rapidly with many steep sections. The river flows through a stunning gorge that is approximately 20 meters deep, surrounded by vertical, columnar basalt cliffs, creating a striking natural landscape.

These cliffs were formed as a result of volcanic eruptions from the nearby Khorgo Mountain and surrounding volcanoes. This area offers tourists the opportunity to explore the natural history and marvel at the mountainous beauty, while also providing a peaceful environment for rest and relaxation.
